IN A
GLOBAL CRISIS

Dear friends and supporters,

At United Way Central Alberta, we are leading efforts in collaboration with our partners to help our community overcome the challenges and pave the way for the future landscape of the social service sector in Central Alberta.

We are mobilizing the community organizations, corporate partners, volunteers and staff members of our community together to find the most effective ways of serving people who are vulnerable. As campaign season approaches we continue to seek out safe and innovative ways to stay connected to our donors, partners and community members.

United, we can overcome the current challenges that our community faces, continue to set goals for making a big impact, and ensure the vulnerable people in our community get the support and service we commit to.

Our United Way Central Alberta offices will begin our phase one of reopening starting next week, Monday, June 1st. Our staff will be working from the office in teams of three on a week by week rotation. The office door will be closed with doorbell access to the public and regular business hours. You can reach our staff by calling the office number 403-343-3900. And remember, if you are in need of information, you can call 211 at any time of day in more than 200 languages. You can also text 211 or go online at ab.211.ca to chat or browse.

Sincerely,

Brett Speight, CEO

COVID-19 Emergency Community Support Fund

Canada

COVID-19 is top of mind for everyone and is affecting the way we all support those who are vulnerable in our communities. This pandemic has created an increase in demand for local services, shortages in supplies, and disruption in service.

United Way Central Alberta is pleased to administer the funds provided by the Canadian Government to support local community service organizations that provide rapid, emergency community support to vulnerable community members.

Applications are available on our grant site at United Way Grants.
